

Frank McCune

Frank McCune is currently the director of government relations for the city of Phoenix. In this role, he confers with the mayor, council members, executive team and department heads to build and represent the city of Phoenix's regional, state, and federal legislative priorities. Previously, Frank worked in government affairs at APS (Arizona Public Service) as a lobbyist to local cities and towns in Arizona. He was also the CEO of Valley Leadership where he coordinated community-wide leadership development programs for adults and teens in conjunction with hundreds of volunteers and sponsors.

Born in Gallup, New Mexico, and raised in Northern Arizona, Frank has 20 years of professional experience in public affairs, marketing, and nonprofit management. He began his career in marketing and business planning for Accenture Consulting, working in the aerospace, telecommunications, and manufacturing industries.

He has served on the boards of numerous nonprofits in Arizona such as the Arizona Town Hall, Arizona State University's National Alumni Council, Junior Achievement of Southern Arizona, the Tucson Zoological Society and Valley Youth Theatre.

Frank earned his B.A. in communication from Arizona State University, his M.S. in political science from Illinois State University and was a CORO Foundation Public Affairs Fellow.
